

Aga Khan Students Win the Young Farmers Club Award

Aga Khan Academy of Mombasa shone brightly during the 2017 Agricultural Society of Kenya show.

The school, which boasts of an avalanche of talents, won the overall Young Farmers Club of Kenya award.

Cabinet Secretary in charge of Gender and Youth Silly Kariuki was full of praise of the school after she handed over the glittering trophy to the school's Young Farmer's Club patron Henry Nyaga flanked by two students Josette Kiarie and Lian Maina who also exhibited at the show.

Josette was also adjudged the best young exhibitor and selected to head to this month's Nairobi International Trade Fair.

Josette won after showcasing her talent in controlling emissions into the atmosphere.

Lian Maina and Josette Kiarie display the trophies won by Aga Khan Academy Mombasa during Mombasa International Show.

The exhibition showed how

Josette provided enough micro organisms to bring about effective decomposition of kitchen waste.

She has entered into partnership with some leading beach hotels to use their kitchen waste to decompose as fertilizer, which can be used for gardening purposes rather than having them thrown to landfills.

Nyaga said Young Farmer's club helps the youth in developing leadership and empowerment.

"Our exhibition at this year's Mombasa International show clearly showed our students are equally good in creativity as they are in class," said Nyaga.

Nyaga said Aga Khan Academy Mombasa defeated over 11 schools drawn from the entire Coast region to bag the award.

"It was our time to shine and we did in style," added Nyaga.

Josette Kiarie of Aga Khan Academy Mombasa, receives a trophy from Cabinet Secretary in charge of Gender and Youth Silly Kariuki at Mombasa International Show.